

Possible email text to recruit:

Qualitative Researcher Journeys

Third-parties or networks

Dear

I wondered if you would like to be interviewed about your experiences as a qualitative researcher?

I'm developing Qualitative Research courses for new researchers AND for people who teach qualitative research. I plan to generate an open data-set for use on the course. The hope is that it will also be a useful data-set for lecturers to use in their teaching, rather than abstracting bits from their own research, with all the practical and ethical difficulties that involves. The theme is Qualitative Research, so the data should be conceptually accessible for students regardless of their disciplinary background.

You would have early access to the data-sets and example project documents, and have an opportunity to reflect on your practice. If not, would you consider – in true snowballing fashion – passing this on to someone who might be interested.

The full call and associated links are below.